

CNET

China Needs English Teachers Website:
www.mmbolding.com
713-962-7356

English Teachers are desperately needed for Chinese students from kindergarten to the college level. The People's Republic of China is in a rapid period of modernization. The effects of the "Opening Up" and reform since 1989 are beginning to reach the multitudes in the world's most populated country. Education is the key to continuing this movement. English has been compulsory in the educational system for a generation now. But, as the modernization continues, more and more schools are in need of quality American instructors in ESL.

About Us

Zhu Yan and Mark Bolding are a husband and wife living in Houston, TX. They formerly lived in Changzhou in Eastern China. Yan is fluent in English and worked as an interpreter in the Chinese banking system. Mark worked in China as a middle school teacher from 2003-2005. They are recruiters for the Jiangsu Provincial Department of Education in Nanjing, China. Yan can give the Chinese perspective of her society, while Mark can give an idea of what a foreigner can expect.

Why CNET?

We recruit only current teachers, students or recent graduates from four year colleges through Education or English Departments. We work directly through a Provincial Bureau of Education in China as opposed to contracting with a specific schools and charging fees to perspective teachers, which is the norm for recruiting agencies. There are no fees and this provides for much greater security upon arrival in China. With the oversight of the Bureau, the funding mechanism of the Chinese educational system, the likelihood of a contract not being honored is minimized.

See China, Gain Experience

CNET's mission is to educate the youth of China. In so doing, teachers can also experience the wonders of Chinese society and history. We offer one or two semester teaching contracts and recruit for a special two week summer program, as well. The education field in the U.S. can be extremely competitive in many markets. Experience is a must. We offer a chance to gain valuable teaching experience in the international market to recent grads. Also, experienced teachers are highly prized by Chinese schools and Education Bureaus as living examples to their fellow Chinese teachers.

Learn More:

www.mmbolding.com